Personal Appearance Services

What are Personal Appearance Services?

Personal appearance services includes beauty therapy, hairdressing or skin penetration services (including tattooing, scarring and implanting substances)

As a general guide, a higher risk personal appearance service is a personal appearance service where the release of blood or other bodily fluid is an expected result.

Higher risk personal appearance services require a licence.

Why do I need a licence?

Whether accidental or not, personal appearance services that involve skin penetration can spread blood-borne diseases such as HIV, hepatitis B and hepatitis C. These diseases are spread by blood-to-blood contact due to contaminated instruments from an infected person being used on another person without adequate precautions.

Correct construction, maintenance and operation of higher risk personal appearance services ensures the risk of infection is minimised by both the client and the operator.

As such, the Public Health (Infection Control for Personal Appearance Services) Act 2003 requires:

- Businesses that provide higher personal risk appearance services to hold a licence; and
- A person who personally provides a higher risk personal appearance service to hold an infection control qualification.

When do I need a licence?

Examples of higher risk activities that require a licence include:

- Body piercing (does not include ear or nose piercing with a gun);
- Implanting natural or synthetic substances into a person's skin (for example hair or beads);
- Scarring or cutting a person's skin using a sharp instrument to make a permanent mark, pattern or design;
- Tattooing;
- Tattoo removal involving skin penetration

When don't I need a licence?

Non-higher risk services that do not need a licence include:

- Ear and nose piecing (with a gun);
- Hairdressing;
- Beautician services (waxing, nail sculpting/enhancing, electrolysis, application of cosmetics and treatments)

Medical treatment processes that involve penetration of the skin are also exempt and do not require a licence. This includes:

- Medical practitioners and persons acting under their direction;
- Dentists and persons acting under their direction;
- Acupuncturists;
- Podiatrists;
- Physiotherapists;
- Registered nurses and persons administering injections as part of a required medical treatment.

However, even if you are not required to hold a licence, you still need to comply with other relevant requirements including:

- Making sure you have planning approval; and
- Complying with the Queensland Health Infection Control Guidelines for Personal Appearance Services
